IWG AND AEROSPACE CONCEPTS SIGN REPRESENTATION AGREEMENT

October 13, 2004

Burnaby, BC, Canada - International Water-Guard Industries Inc. (IWG) is pleased to announce that it has signed a Representation Agreement with Aerospace Concepts (ACL), of St. Laurent, Quebec. Under the terms of the agreement, Aerospace Concepts will offer IWG's Circulating Potable Water System (C-PWS™) to owners of early model Bombardier Global Express aircraft as part of a refurbishment package, and to owners of other business jet aircraft types as well.

"The IWG circulating system presents real value in terms of weight reduction, freeze protection, and overall system performance," said Kevin Hoffman, ACL President and CEO. "ACL is all about providing integrated solutions and adding value to an aircraft investment, so we're pleased to be able to offer the IWG system as part of a comprehensive completions package."

"Aerospace Concepts is well respected in the business aircraft completions industry, so they will be effective at presenting the advantages of our circulating potable water system, particularly to operators of the early model Global Express," said David Fox, IWG's President and CEO. "Our system takes weight off the airplane, cuts maintenance costs, improves system functioning, and provides clean, safe water at the taps, so it's a logical addition to any aircraft refurbishment program."

Aerospace Concepts offers high-level expertise for owners and operators of large-cabin business aircraft. Aerospace Concept's services include: Aircraft Acquisitions; Interior Design; Technical Acceptance; Completion Management; Engineering; and Flight Operations Support
